The Department of Fine Arts now has its own Art Gallery located directly across from the Arts Building at 9021 - 12th Street. The Official Opening Ceremony of this colonial style gallery will be performed by President Johns on Sunday, November 1st at 2:00 p.m.

The main floor of the building has been remodelled for the showing of a number of art exhibitions during the year. The upper and lower floors have been made into studios for eleven Fine Arts students.

Professor E.N. Yates, Chairman of the campus exhibitions stresses the didactic role of the gallery. Here the student will have constant contact with both established and unknown works of art. Included in the exhibitions to be shown during the year are art works from Poland, Great Britain and the United States as well as many Canadian works and university student and staff art.

The first major exhibition of paintings will be opened in conjunction with the Official Opening. All works to be shown in the exhibition have been loaned by members of the university staff. American, British, and Canadian painting and drawings will be presented. Among those representative of Canadian art will be paintings by A.Y. Jackson, Jean McEwan, H.G. Glyde, Joe Plaskett, and Jack Shadbolt; of British art, Wyndham Lewis and Ceri Richards; of American art, Boyd Allen and Mary Gisz dich. For this show, the gallery will be open to viewers from 12:00 to 1:30 p.m. and from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. It is hoped that these hours will continue for all shows.

EXTENSION CLASSES

The Department of Extension evening class program gets underway during the last part of September and early part of October this fall. This is a non-credit program open to the general public which attracts some 3,000 students each year. University staff members have been taking an increasing interest in the subjects offered, since through this program a good opportunity is provided for staff members to hear staff members of other faculties and departments on their specialty. This year it will be possible for all faculty members, graduate students, and administrative staff to register in any of the evening classes by paying one-half of the regular fee. It is not possible for us to extend this privilege to spouses or members of the immediate family. Also, where classes are strictly limited, this privilege cannot be granted except under special circumstances. Anyone interested in applying to take any of the evening classes, or for that matter any extension course, short course, or workshop, should apply directly to the Director, Mr. Duncan Campbell, or the Assistant Director, Mr. Glen Eyford.

The program this year includes a number of intensive language courses in French, German, Spanish, Russian, Ukrainian, Italian, and Norwegian. In the humanities and the social sciences there will be courses on religion, philosophy, psychology, sociology, criminology, and anthropology. The offerings in history and public affairs are greatly increased this year, and include a course on the B.N.A. Act, Communism, the United Nations, and the History of Canada. There is the usual wide variety of courses in the fine arts, in drawing, painting, design, sculpture, ceramics, etc. In music there are courses in Ear Training and Sight Singing, Chamber Music Playing Sessions, What to Listen for in Music, and an interesting course on Wagner. The sciences are represented by courses in Organic Chemistry, Petroleum Geology, Fossils of Alberta, Astronomy, Botany, Zoology, and a course on Science and Society. In business and industrial training, courses are offered in Work Study, Operations Research, small business, law, managing investments, and effective reading. Any staff member who has not received a copy of the brochure describing these and many other Extension courses may obtain one by contacting the Department of Extension, local 298.

Extension Classes in the Sciences

Beginning in the first week of November, the Department of Extension will offer two five-session courses of particular interest to faculty members. They are entitled "Science and Society" and "Recreational Mathematics" and are offered to University staff at the half fee rate of $5.00.

Science and Society Will the many resources of science be able to respond adequately to the urgent demands of society? What are the effects of the population explosion on our needs for food, raw materials, energy and technical knowledge? These and many other questions will be considered through lectures and discussions conducted by Dr. W. E. Harris, Professor of Chemistry. The sessions begin Monday, November 2nd from 8 - 9:30 p.m. in Room 101 of the Math-Physics Building.

Recreational Mathematics This lecture series will survey classical and modern problems, puzzles and games having mathematical content, and their relationship to more serious aspects of mathematics and the sciences. Particular topics to be discussed include recreational aspects of arithmetic and algebra, geometrical puzzles and games, logical and mathematical paradoxes, mathematical aspects of solitaire games, and games of chance and conflict. Dr. L. Moser, Professor and Associate Head of Mathematics will give the course beginning Wednesday, November 4th from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. in Room 101, Maths-Physics Building.

Registration for these two courses will take place from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Department of Extension and for one hour prior to the first classes.

"Research" Theme for Chamber of Commerce, Business and Education Day

The annual Chamber of Commerce Business and Education Day is being held November 4 on campus. The theme of this year's program is Research. A tour to various areas of research on campus has been arranged to indicate by spot checks the kinds of research being done, to give an overall impression of the large amount of research going on, to point out that Edmonton is a research centre, and to impress businessmen that industry could draw on research knowledge.

Participants in the program will be made up of about 50% businessmen and 50% high school teachers. In the morning they will be divided into groups. Each group will visit one of the following centres: Research Council of Alberta; Chemcell (1963) Limited; Faculty of Dentistry; Research in Kidney Disease (University Hospital); Open Heart Surgery (University Hospital); Department of Radiology (University Hospital); Nuclear Research Centre and Department of Computing Science; Faculty of Education Clinic; and the Faculty of Engineering. At a luncheon arranged for them at Lister Hall and Chaired by Mr. G.L. Roper, Dr. Max Wyman will be the Guest Speaker. A panel discussion has been arranged for the afternoon to discuss implications of research with Dr. Francis Winspear as moderator. Panel members are

Dean H.T. Coutts,
Dr. W.A.G. Graham
Mr. J. Oberholzer,
and Mr. R. Sutherland

NATO Offers Research Grants & An Advanced Study Institute Program

Research Grants for Canadian scientists are available from the NATO Scientific Affairs Division to be expended on equipment, supplies, travel expenses, and, in some cases, salaries of scientists and technicians working on a particular project. Two types of research projects are supported by these grants: (1) those in the technically less developed countries of NATO where international aid is desirable; (2) those involving international collaboration within the NATO countries. Applications can be accepted at any time during the year at NATO Scientific Affairs Division, Place du Marechal de Lattre de Tassigy, Paris 16 e, France. The applicant should outline the aims and scope of the proposed research program (about 4 pages), give information about the institute where the research will be undertaken and also details about the principal investigators, describe the international collaboration envisaged in the project, submit a detailed budget for the grant requested, and give the names and addresses of two referees.

Canadians planning to organize an Advanced Study Institute on any scientific topic are eligible to apply to NATO (same address as above) for support. The Director of a NATO Advanced Study Institute has the entire responsibility for all scientific and practical arrangements, including arrangements for invitations to prospective participants and general publicity. NATO Advanced Study Institutes may be co-sponsored by other sources. Applications should be received by December 15th and should provide a short title of the activity to be sponsored, the name and address of the Director of the proposed Study Institute, the location and dates of the proposed Institute, and the expected number of lecturers, students and other participants.
